Would you like to:

- Share a course project or research paper in a professional setting?
- Meet other graduate students and discuss research issues?
- Meet faculty in an informal setting to discuss methodological issues?
- Begin the process of becoming an engaged scholar by taking first steps in presenting your work?

Join your colleagues in Educational Administration programs at the MAPEA Leadership Symposium

Deadline for submissions:
February 1, 2010.

You can participate in the symposium in several ways:

- Present a paper or research project
- Sign up for a guidance session with faculty and graduates to discuss challenges in your work
- Attend State of Michigan Superintendent Mike Flanagan's keynote speech
- Meet and network with Michigan Educational Leadership faculty and students from different institutions

Papers can be course projects or recent research. Presentations are 10 minutes with 5 minutes for questions and discussion. It's easy to submit your abstract electronically using the PDF form at www.mapea.org.

Discussion groups offer an opportunity to meet with faculty and other students to discuss methodological problems, issues in educational research, or receive advice about challenges in your program? Use the application form on the website to sign up for a discussion group. Let us know what you are interested in discussing and we will organize a group around what you need. You do not have to present to join a group.
